

Health care is one of the fastest growing and most secure fields for new graduates. Recent census data indicates that the health care industry is the largest employer in 37 of the 50 states!

Students choose to study in health-related majors because they care about making a difference in people's lives and in the well-being of their communities.

Students also find that health care jobs are fulfilling and pay well.

These programs are commonly in the top five highest starting salaries for SU graduates, and many are admitted to post-undergraduate professional programs like medicine, dentistry, pharmacy, physical therapy and occupational therapy.

In a recent study of SU graduates, more than 90% of graduates had secured jobs in majors such as medical laboratory science, respiratory therapy, nursing, and community health within six months of graduation.

The aging of the U.S. population and the opportunity for new therapeutic innovations should keep health care jobs in high demand in the coming years.
